THE STAGE-DRIVER'S STORY

route from Gallatin to Helena, in Montans, driving a four-horse coach in summer and a "jerky" in winter, seventy miles a day through the wildest region and over one of the most dangerous routes in the United States. The country through which his trail ran-for it was little else, than a trail-was totally uninhabited, but for three stage stations where horses were changed, and which were dug-outs, or log-huts, twenty miles apart. The Indians, though generally friendly, were liable to become enemies at a moment's warning; road agents and outlaws were thicker upon the Gallatin route than any other north of the Union Pacific froad, and the route itself rat through guilles and canons, and along the verge of dizzy precipices, as though originally laid out by mountain sheep. Notwithstanding this Jake was a suc cessful driver, made better time lost fewer mails and express safes, and ran his coach at a smaller expense to the company than any other man in their employ. But when mistortune did in the pass. I see it all." overtake him, it was no light hand that the genius of evil laid upon himwhich the following adventure goes to prove:

One muggy morning in early May as Jake hauled up in front of the stage office and prepared to receive mails, express and messenger, and passengers, if any there should be for Helena, the Wells-Farge agent called to him from within. Throwing the reins over the rose. foot-brake. Pool descended from his perch and entered the office.

The agent shut the door behind him:

"There's fifteen thousand in currenet in the safe to take over to day." "All right," responded Jake, "Twe carried more before now, and carried it

"But," said the agent, drawing still nearer, "Dick's sick, and there's no "Alt." said the driver, meditatively then, touching the revolver which hung at his belt, "I'll be messenger and coaclunan both, thèn."

"But," still continued the other, "there's one thing more," and he leaned forward so that his lips touched his companion's ear. "'Copper Tom' and his pal, 'Old Jim,' are on the road. A man from Cross Trees was robbed by them last night."

Pool whistled long and low, and his hand fell from his pistol-butt. "Copper Tom" was the worst road event in Montune a desperado with both convace

"After I get through the Devil's Pass," said he to himself, "Copper Tom or any other man may whistle for me, for from that to Dickson's is as handome a road as ever a horse struck foot upon, and whoever tries to stop me there, unless he shoots first, will go under the leader's feet. I intend to make that little seven miles in just twenty eight minutes without brakes."

And he gathered his reigns with firmer hand, as if already whirling at that mad pace down the mountain-aide

"Let's see," he continued, "if nothing goes wrong and the road's all right I will then be broad daylight, so I can spin down the 'causeway,' I'll atrike Dickson's before seven, certain. Beyoud that the road is too open and too gerous. By Jove!" he concluded, his heart warming as he struck his heels me, unless-Good heavens! what if they try it in the very pass itself? The granite walls of the pass were now just before them, and the readway, lescending and steep, ran into the slindow of the coming night and the gloom of the grave-like opening-a narby that hour Pool was more than twen- row path, but little wider than the The Province of Constitutional Amend coach itself.

This is an increase of $610,707,028 in four years, an average of $100,170,757 a year. How rapid is the growth of the South is evidenced by the fact that the increased assessments over 1882 amount to $253,000,000—nearly the value of the coulon crop. In every respect the South has improved, but in none more so than valueading, fully $200,000,000 being invested in the construction of new railroads. During the last four years, four Southern, States—Acknessing, Florance, Challeton and Texas—have doubled their railroad mileage, as the following table will above:

This is an increace in three years of 7,789 miles—one-quarter of the increase for the whole country.

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every partof the body, and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible. If disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

it out is to purify and eartch the blood.

There simple facts are well known, and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing has iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause head-ache, and are otherwise injurious. Brown's Iron Birtrass will thoreoughly and quickly assimilate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it, and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and lapsill not blacken the teeth, cause head-ache or constitution, and is positively not injurious.
